ANDREA MONROE  Not Done Yet

In artist Andrea Monroe’s celebratory painting, a modern-day woman stands arm-in-arm with a Suffragist at a women’s rights march. Her painting conveys the joy of past achievements while acknowledging that the fight for equal rights, equal pay, and autonomy over their bodies has not been won for women. And so the march continues.